

HOSPICE IN THE NURSING HOME

DESCRIPTION:

Nearly a quarter of American's die in long-term care settings. While hospice involvement has improved outcomes for dying nursing home patients and their families, numerous obstacles exist for hospice providers. This presentation will identify some of the key pitfalls that hospice providers face, while also highlighting opportunities for collaboration, growth and enhanced patient/family care.

EXPERT PANELISTS:

John Cagle, MSW, PhD, is an assistant professor at the University of Maryland-Baltimore, School of Social Work with a substantive interest in improving care at the end of life. As a translational health services researcher, his efforts have focused on identifying effective models of care and support for dying patients and their families – and implementing those models into routine clinical practice. His research is informed by nearly a decade of clinical work as a hospice social worker. Dr. Cagle completed his PhD from Virginia Commonwealth University where his dissertation thesis explored the needs and experiences of informal caregivers of advanced cancer patients.

After being awarded his doctoral degree in 2008, he trained as an NIA-funded postdoctoral fellow at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Institute on Aging as well as the University of California, San Francisco, Division of Geriatrics. His current research examines disparities in care at the end of life, psychosocial barriers to pain management, and improving palliative care outcomes in long-term care settings. His research has been supported by a number of public and private entities, including the Hospice

Foundation of America, the National Palliative Care Research Center, the John A. Hartford Foundation, the National Institute on Aging, the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization, and the Foundation for Care at the End of Life.

Kathleen T. Unroe, MD, MHA, is an Assistant Professor of Medicine at Indiana University in Indianapolis and a Research Scientist with IU Center for Aging Research and Regenstrief Institute. She is a nursing home physician – her research, clinical and policy interests are focused on improving quality of care, particularly access to palliative and end-of-life care, for long stay nursing home residents. Dr. Unroe is the co-project director of OPTIMISTIC, a 8 year $30.3 million CMS funded demonstration project aimed at improving quality of care and reducing avoidable hospitalizations in 44 Indiana nursing homes and is the Principal Investigator of a Hartford Foundation planning grant focused on OPTIMISTIC dissemination.
